DOWN IN THE TUBE

Vladimir Putin was seen on the Hampton Subway traveling east from Amagansett toward Montauk Thursday morning. He is interested in buying a dacha deep in the forest near Montauk Point. Jon Stewart, the humorist turned filmmaker was seen on the Bridgehampton platform with a camera filming passersby heading for the trains Tuesday. The movie is called Escalator about an escalator to a subway platform that malfunctions. It is a dark noir affair filming in black and white.

POST MEMORIAL DAY CLEANUP

We are pleased to be able to allow the volunteers from the Hamptons Cleanup Environmental Group onto our tracks to clean up all the trash thrown down there over Memorial Day Weekend. They have finished with the beach cleanup and the roadside cleanup and they wanted to clean up something else, so we told them go right ahead, the tracks will be cleaned up sooner than later and our regular staff won't have to do it. So knock yourselves out, but be sure to always wear the rubber boots we provided, because otherwise the Third Rail could give you a nasty jolt. We also had them sign a waiver indemnifying us against anything. They're good people, the environmentalists.

BEACH SPURS TO OPEN

Both the Southampton spur from Monument Square to Coopers Beach and the East Hampton spur from Newtown Lane to Main Beach will open for business next week. Our maintenance crew (not having to clean up on the tracks) are instead scrubbing and polishing the two beach stations to get them open a week earlier than last year. Thank you environmental group. Until then, as you take the regular train, you will be able to briefly hear the Beach Boys music pumping loud as you go by where the boys and girls are working.

HAMPTON SUBWAY DATING.COM

The new Hampton Subway dating service is open. On your computer, go to the site and enter your personal data, and we give you 20 people to meet and a particular "last" subway car ticket for a particular train that leaves the Montauk Yards for a circuit of the system at a particular time. Since the arrival times are indicated on your ticket for each station, you can get on it anywhere. If you don't like what you see, just get out of that car, and get on another. It's all up to you. And it's free, just another service of Hampton Subway. We make the money when you go through the turnstiles.

SURVEILLANCE LAWSUIT

A group of eight people boarded the third car of the Hampton Subway last Friday at 3:22 p.m. at the Southampton stop and for 22 minutes between the Hampton Bays stop and the Westhampton stop discussed filing a class action lawsuit against us to get Hampton Subway to cease spying on the passengers in each of the subway cars with our surveillance cameras. They have not yet filed the suit but if they do we want to let them know that we know exactly who they are and we do not take kindly to being sued about this. That's why we have a surveillance system.

COMMISSIONER ASPINALL'S MESSAGE

It is my pleasure to welcome you to Summer in the Hamptons. Hampton Subway may be underground where you probably imagine it to be always dark, but we are now in negotiations with a tanning studio to turn each platform into a giant walk in tanning booth. The longer you wait for a train, the darker your tan. Oh, happy day.

PANIC TAKES OVER

Nervous residents across the East End called police to report uniformed figures performing maneuvers on a local bay beach. Made uneasy by hazy rumors of takeover plots circulating recently, including high-profile warnings of an impending takeover of New York State by the state of Texas, the callers were concerned that the activities they were witnessing were the beginnings of the establishment of a totalitarian state under the control of Texas. "The callers we spoke with were terrified," noted police spokesman Larry Hirsch. "One woman said that she had seen a group of officers marching past wearing 10-gallon hats and cowboy boots. Another thought he smelled barbeque. They were clearly so frightened that they were hallucinating." Hirsch assured the public that there is absolutely no truth to the idea that Texas has taken over New York State, and that those who spread rumors claiming otherwise will "find themselves saying 'howdy' to our new friends in Houston." In closing, Hirsch said, "Y'all take it easy, and drive friendly."

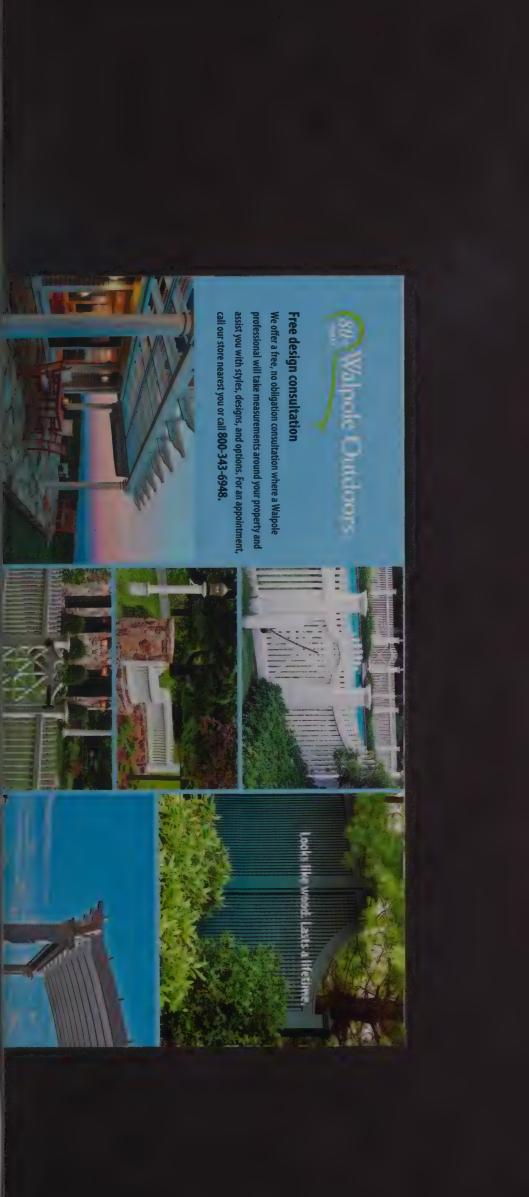

POLICE WARY OF BICYCLE MENACE

As the weather has gotten better, local police have been bracing themselves for the renewal of tensions provoked by bicycle gangs on the East End. The gangs tend to travel in packs, dressed in skin-tight outfits of bright reds, blues, yellows, and even pinks-in complete disregard for fashion rules. They amass in public parks or at beaches, blighting the landscape with their eye-straining attire. They project an air of menace towards others on the road, making nearly everyone uncomfortable. They even upset local bird populations, who often mistake the brightly colored cyclists for potential mates—causing much embarrassment.

PC POLICE MAKE ARRESTS

The East End PC Police, a local enforcement unit charged with making sure sensitive topics are treated with the proper care, made several arrests over the holiday weekend. In one case, a group of girls playing jump rope were discovered to be repeating a traditional rhyme about a circus elephant being made to jump a fence, and were arrested for insensitivity towards an endangered species. "Even the Ringling Brothers have stopped the barbaric use of trained elephants," explained PC Police Chief Nasser Decker. "These girls should have known better." In another case, a group of young children were spotted playing Ring Around the Rosie and were taken into custody. "They probably think it's just a game, but that little song they sing makes light of a dreaded disease that killed off over half the population of Europe in the 1300s," pointed out Decker. The children are in jail awaiting official charges.

Weather on Course

A Plan to Have a Six-Month Summer Season Is Underway

BY DAN RATTINER

A t the beginning of March, I formulated a plan for how we might have the longest and most wonderful summer season in the history of the Hamptons.

It all hinged on the fact that we had just come through the most miserable winter imaginable. All together, we had over five feet of snow. We also had, in February, the lowest average temperature in the history of weather recordskeeping in Bridgehampton. Normal for February is 33 degrees. This past February it was 19 degrees. I don't have to tell you. Brrrrr.

For my plan, everything had to hinge on that dramatic report from February. At the end of the year, everything averages out, of course. And so, with February down 14 degrees, I figured that we had at least 14 degrees to make up over the remaining 10 months to bring us back up to even. The key would be when to have them.

In our usual year, we have spring weather in May and June, then the swimming and sunbathing weather in July and August, and then autumn weather again in September and October.

What if we could arrange to make up those 14 degrees by sprinkling them into May, June, September and October? We'd have a six-month summer. We'd have temperatures in the 70s every night and temperatures in the 80s during the day. And we could truly boast of a six-month summer. Among other things, this would completely take our towns and villages by surprise as far as beach parking goes. At the present time, we only enforce rules for parking during the high season. We'd have crowds of happy people before that and after that down at the beach. And the parking would be free.

Specifically, what I ordered up was 4 degrees above normal in May, 4 degrees above normal in June, and 4 degrees above normal in September and then again in October.

And it's happening.

I just got off the phone with NOAA, which keeps score of the weather in these parts. In March and April, I didn't want any above average weather. In March and April we went further down into the negative, 7 degrees below normal in March and 1.4 degrees below normal in April. Add it all together, the amount to be made up is now 22.4 degrees. So we need 5 degrees above normal in the spring and fall instead of 4. I have the numbers for the first ten days of May. We've had the warm temperatures I had hoped for. The average temperature historically in May for the first ten days is 55.3.

So far, we're averaging 58.6.

The trees and flowers here are going nuts. They are trying mightily now to bloom after having buttoned themselves up tight all winter, and now you can hear them, buzzing and creaking and occasionally popping as buds open, and we were in full bloom bloom on Memorial Day weekend as were supposed to.

Six-month summer, here we come. And if you tally it all up at the end of the year, it will have been just an average ho-hum year. A wide swing to cold in February, and 5 degrees too warm in May, June, September and Ocober to make it all up.

RESULTS OF THE LAST SNOWDRIFT CONTEST

At the beginning of April (we had 9.6 inches of snow in March) I asked readers to send in photos of the last snowdrift standing. The one with the latest date stamp would win a prize. And the winner would be announced May 1 when, presumably, the last of them would have melted. The winner came in anonymously and can be seen on DansPapers. com. It was photographed on April 17 on Buckskill Road in East Hampton. As it was sent anonymously, we hereby do not offer up the prize. Too bad. We'll have the contest again next year.

55-Year Embargo Over

Visit Cuba This Year Before It Becomes Like Everywhere Else

BY DAN RATTINER

hen things get slow in the wintertime at Dan's Papers, I head off, as most locals do, to other places to either play tourist and lie on the beach or enjoy some sort of adventure to add a little spice in my life. I stayed one winter at a fishing village on the Canary Islands. I was at the Berlin Wall for New Year's Eve when the locals celebrated having brought it down and bringing East and West together. I spent a winter in Moscow in the 1980s during the Soviet era. I've been going on these sorts of adventures for 50 years now. And I've seen much of the world this way. Last year it was Ireland and Northern Ireland.

One of the most remarkable trips I took was to Havana in 2000. It was illegal to go to Cuba then because the United States had embargoed trade with Cuba 40 years earlier, but there were two ways to go anyway. One was as part of a "cultural" exchange mission. The other was to fly to Mexico City and then enter Cuba from there. Mexico let you fly out. The Cubans weren't crazy about anybody with an American passport coming in, but they let you in anyway from Mexico. I went that year to Cuba with a cultural group, as press, just a 60-minute flight from Miami into a totally other world. Custom agents at Havana Airport treated us roughly, but in the end, with a clear attitude of disgust, after deliberately banging suitcases and bags around, they let us in.

For those not familiar with what had happened 40 years earlier, I will tell you about it briefly. In 1959, Cuba's heroic rebels came down from the mountains and wrested away the government of that country from a brutal dictator. This dictator had been America's friend for a long time. He was corrupt and vicious, but he saw to it that the rich got richer and the poor stayed poor. After the overthrow, Fidel Castro arrested, lined up and shot many of the former regime members, much of it documented on film. Most of the rich fled to Miami after this. A year later, Castro became friends with America's bitterest enemy, the Soviet Union. As a result, America embargoed all trade to Cuba, and this embargo remained in effect until just three weeks ago. That's a 55-year long embargo.

Anyway, at the airport, I figured, maybe we should turn around and go home. But we didn't. And I am so glad we didn't.

We took a taxi, a 43-year-old 1957 Chevy, to Havana and the hotel where we would stay, the Hotel Sevilla in the center of that city. What a city. It is like no other. Imagine a beautiful European city of 2 million people largely built during the eighteenth, nineteenth and early twentieth centuries, with cathedrals, markets, plazas, parks, Spanish forts, boulevards, pensions and grand hotels, after which, in 1959, time stopped. Everything in 2000 was just as it was 40 years earlier but in shambles. It had never been cleaned or repainted or repaired and it was just rusting away, walls peeling, windows broken and held together, shutters and doors hanging at crazy angles. Also, there were few cars on the road, and those that were there were half a century old. About the only thing still as it had been was the great seawall along the boulevard in the center of town against which the ocean crashed. America was just 90 miles away.

We drove through the suburbs of Havana, where the rich once lived in very fancy mansions with swimming pools and servants. Those buildings are still there. But in each as many as a dozen families lived. This is communism, after all. The wash hung on clotheslines attached to the fancy Greek columns that sheltered the front door entrance. The kids played soccer on the worn out lawn.

Then, into town, a (Cont'd on next page) surprise. The people were NOT downtrodden. People were everywhere on the streets and there was lots of music. A man strode along carrying a 4-year-old on his shoulders, two 15-year olds were jockeying a small hand wagon along the sidewalk with an old TV on it. Standing alone in a doorway was a woman in full white bridal regalia. Men sat at a table on the sidewalk playing checkers.

We checked in at the hotel. The Hotel Sevilla was the grandest hotel in Havana when it was built in 1908. It was the winter playground for the American mafia. (There was no Las Vegas then). On the walls were black-and-white framed photographs of Al Capone and all the other gangsters, together An American fighter plane captured in 1959 rebellion with showgirls in feathers. Upstairs, the rooms were large and the windows very high up, as you might see at an old elementary school. The hotel was 10 stories high.

On the rooftop was an aviary where the hotel guests ate. It was not intended as an aviary. It had originally been a giant glass palace up there. But with the broken windows and all, the birds flew in and out now, often landing on your table in the hopes you wouldn't shoo them away. I recall big black crows with sharp beaks and beady eyes looking at my food. Meanwhile, during the meal musicians played salsa music. Looking out and down, the historic rooftops, domes and steeples were gorgeous and filthy as far as the eve could see.

The hotel had plenty of help, but when a time came, in the middle of the night, that I woke up with mosquitoes biting me in bed, there was a spray that a cleaning lady had in her bag, but it was a local concoction of liquids, none of which were bug spray. There is no bug spray in Cuba, or at least there wasn't in 2000.

The people simply make do. How do you do without things such as soap, hair conditioners, coffee makers, crayons, deodorant, paint removers? I saw caps from old deodorant bottles used as game board players, aluminum soda cans made into coffee makers, spoons fashioned into bottle openers.

And the people loved it all. I talked to lots of them on these streets, in bookstores, libraries, old beat up city buses, at outdoor cafes, in schools. They were well-fed, had good schools. free medical care, a leader who did not work in a palace but in an office like the rest of them. When I talked to them about their failure to have democracy and their failure to even have newspapers that wrote about the issues of the day, they replied that when you face a country like the United States, you had to be of one mind and you had to pull together. During all these talks, in the background, always, you would hear Cuban Caribbean music playing somewhere, with people singing along and clapping and stamping their feet. (A few years later, I saw a movie called The Buena Vista Social Club, which was filmed in Havana. It brought back the entire experience I had down there.)

A number of adventures I had stand out. Two blocks away from the Hotel Sevilla is the old Palace where Batista, the dictator lived. It is now a museum to the triumphs of 1959. On the front lawn are an American propeller fighter plane they captured, next to it is an enclosed black van with holes in the side adjacent to gold lettering that read HAVANA LAUNDRY SERVICE from a surprise attack on the palace that failed and everybody died. There is the speedboat (now on a trailer) that Fidel used to come into Havana and an anti-aircraft gun that fired on some planes at sometime somewhere.

One day I went to a baseball game in the main Havana stadium, which seated about 15,000 people. I went with a friend from the group, our interpreter, and a young backpacker I had met who had come in via Mexico City. It was the Havana Metros vs. Granma. In the fourth inning, after some 12-year-old boys sold us an autographed baseball (Continued on page 40)

The Sea, Iran & the Cloud

The Deal with Iran Is Going to Happen, the Sea Rises & the Cloud Falls

BY DAN RATTINER

bout a week ago, there was an alarming story in the media about the sea level rise in the northeast. Due to a variety of factors, including a change in the strength of the Gulf Stream, the northeast saw an unprecedented rise of nearly 4 inches in sea level between 2009 and 2010. Why they waited until now to tell us this I don't know, but they said it was an increase never before seen in the northeast. That was all they had to say about it.

I looked into this because it seemed so alarming. Was it continuing? Tell us more? In fact, it turns out to have been just a one year spike, so it is true as the prophet with the beard and the billboard on the street says that the world is coming to an end, but it won't be quite that soon. The sea level settled down to more moderate levels of increase after 2010. It turns out if you look at the trend, it is pretty much related to the ice beginning to melt in the polar regions 40 years ago. But it's not four inches a year.

I bought my house on Three Mile Harbor Road overlooking the harbor in 1975. Between that date and this, the sea level has risen a startling 7.8 inches. But that is over 40 years. In the next 40, if it rises a similar amount, this sea level will be 15.6 inches above where it was

I can absolutely see the 7.8-inch rise right out my living room window. I live on a cove off Three Mile Harbor, and when I bought this house a small wetland peninsula stuck way out, almost to the buoys you see to the left in the picture accompanying this story. It was a good place for clamming.

That peninsula is almost entirely gone now. It hardly sticks out at all as you can see.

In 2005, the Town of East Hampton bought a tiny five-acre treeless sand island in this harbor up near the jetties. There was a house on it. It was called Dayton Island. The Town paid the owners $3.8 million to "save" it back then, an amount many people criticized as way too much for it. Today the house is gone. The island's just a hump of sand, about 3/4 the size of what it was. I expect it will be gone within the next generation.

One foot, 3.6 inches over 80 years is quite a rise. It will be pretty catastrophic then. Given the rise and fall of the tides, sometimes quite severe, we'll have to have sea walls of dunes or we'll have severe flooding. I'll be okay a while. My house is 17 feet up on the side of a hill. It's not going to get me until next century.

Getting to the house might not be so easy, however. But that's another matter. I suppose we'll use boats.

NEGOTIATIONS WITH IRAN

As I am sure you know, the U.S. is in deep discussions with Iran about their nuclear program and our resulting economic sanctions. They signed a protocol in April, which everyone seemed very happy about (except the Israelis, who don't want us to have anything to do with Iran), and the diplomats are now moving forward to creating an actual treaty, which they hope to sign by the end of June.

These negotiations can fail, of course. But I can assure you that they will not. Trust me. As with many people, I have a house in the Hamptons and an apartment in New York City. My wife and I are five days in the Hamptons, two days in New York.

Our apartment, which we've been in for 15 years, is on the Upper East Side on one of the fancier streets, and, as it happens, our 14-story building is right next door to a four-story brownstone that is the residence of the Iranian Ambassador to the United Nations. There's no flags out front indicating this fact, and (Cont'd on next page) there is nothing that says "Iran" anywhere. But our doormen years ago informed us who lived there, and there is sometimes a black limousine out front with diplomatic plates in the no parking zone.

Anyway, I often walk our dog by this building when I am in New York. And since April, there has been all sorts of activity on the sidewalk in front of this residence. Police officers have guarded it day and night. On certain days there's been lines of black SUVs and police cars parked the whole length of the block. Caravans of officials come and go, with police cars with their lights flashing in front and behind. Bodyguards in black suits, sunglasses and earpieces are at the front entrance with hands folded in front of them, eyeballing everybody who goes by, including me and my little dog. On occasion, I have seen snipers out front in full camouflage with machine guns, helmets and bulletproof vests. One night out there, we passed a big box van surrounded by soldiers with a sign on the side that read NYC POLICE, COURTESY,

PROFESSIONALISM, RESPECT. BOMB SQUAD.

Another evening, turning the corner to head for home, I heard the unmistakable booming voice of John Kerry, and there he was, standing out front with several men and women. They were talking to one another, obviously not wanting anyone to hear, and so I slowed down to listen, then, looking at a nearby soldier, decided that was a mistake and speeded back up. "I think what they really mean by that..." Kerry was saying, and then I was too far away to hear anymore.

About a week ago, all this activity came to an end. I went out with my little dog at about 11 that night and there was simply nobody around. What I did see, however, was a big pile of garbage bags, the kind that are white and you can sort of see through. I stopped. Late at night twice a week all the buildings have plastic garbage bags out front for pickup. Out here were paper plates, plastic forks and spoons, a big cardboard box that once had a shredder inside, plastic champagne glasses and pizza boxes were set out in front of the building. Maybe I should take something as a souvenir, I thought. No, that would be wrong, and I walked on.

This is a done deal.

THE CLOUD

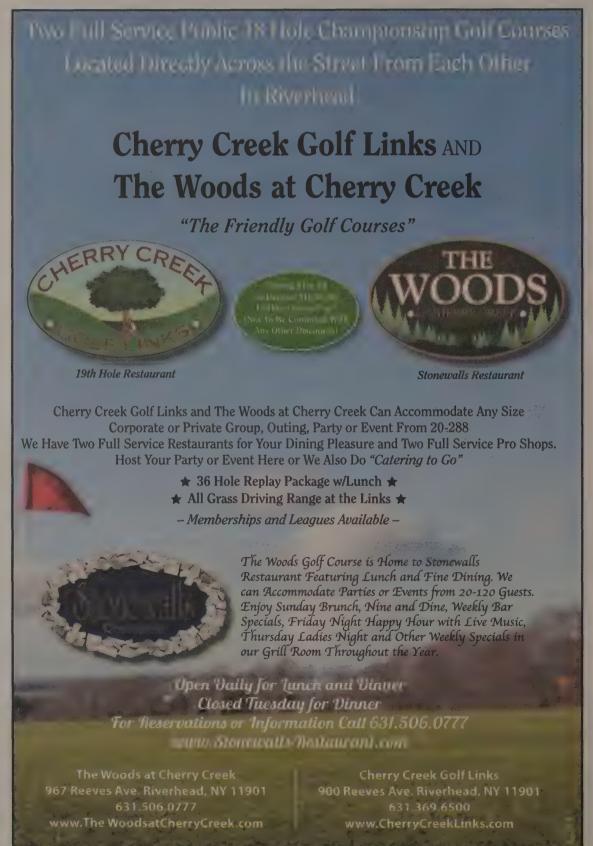

A friend who doesn't believe that carbon material sent up by us into the atmosphere is the cause of global warming, this week hypothesized that the real cause was the Internet. The globe has been warming since about 1980. That's when the Internet started in earnest. His claim is that global warming is being caused by all the data we save in "the cloud."

"It's piling up and piling up," he said. "You can't feel it or see it, but it's there."

He's heard that people break out in hives when they get too close to it. It's like static electricity. But he's very encouraged by the current bill in Congress that could result in the government not saving every text and every phone call from every person in the United States. A decision is expected next week.

"All the phone companies already have this data," he said. "There's no problem. Why duplicate it? If the Homeland Security people tell the phone company there's this terrorist they need to see everything he says, I'm sure they'll provide it. "We all have kids."

He says we have to go back to before 1980.

for $3, asked if we could take their picture and whether they could get any food for us from the vendor (hot dogs, soda), my backpacker friend, Jerry Brown, discovered that upon leaving, one of the 12-year-olds had left with his backpack. There were only two things in it: A paperback book he was reading and a journal, handwritten, of the last 45 days of his travels. "That, I want back," he said. And he got up and told an usher about it. The usher led him to a policeman who he told about it.

Our desire to see the rest of the game ended after that, and so we left, only to see a group of people on the sidewalk just outside the entrance to the stadium. It consisted of two 12-year-olds, three police officers and two women, one of whom was crying hysterically. Next to them were two police cars and a military troop carrier with a canvas covered back. As we came over another police car arrived.

"It's about your backpack," our interpreter said. "The crying woman is saying it's the worst thing that's ever happened to her in her life and her boy is bringing shame to her family.

The boy next to her, who she was holding by the shoulder, was looking at his shoes.

The police invited everybody into the back of the troop carrier, including us, and off we rattled to a nearby police station. A whole investigation, including a conclusion, transpired at that police station. Brown filled out forms, with the help of the interpreter. The boys were taken into an interrogation room for a talking to. I sat on a bench. At one point, I was told the arresting officer was having difficulty understanding the words "travel diary." As it happened, I had a shoulder bag with mine in it. So I gave it to the officer at the desk. He looked at it, nodded, and then put the palm of his hand over it. He was not giving it back. Ten minutes later, the officer asked Brown to sign his name on a piece of paper so they could see if it matched the handwriting in his diary. They were looking around for paper. I had a brainstorm. I told them to sign one of the blank pages of my diary. So they took my diary off the desk, did that, and with that, I got it back.

In the end, after much more paperwork, the mother took the boy home. And we left too, in a 1955 Buick Roadmaster taxicab. I don't believe that boy would be hanging around with that crowd again anytime soon.

I went by myself to the Hotel Nacional, high on the hill, for tea one afternoon. There were still rich people in town who go for tea. Maybe tourists, I don't know. Apparently Castro tolerated it.

We went to a weather station on a mountaintop outside of Havana where, three months earlier, the weather station had run out of the kind of paper their machines needed to keep the weather data, and they couldn't get more. But we saw how it worked. As we ate lunch at a picnic table under a tent out front, a man in a straw hat pulled up the driveway in a jeep, and we were told this was Fidel's younger brother Raúl, a farmer.

"He wants nothing to do with government work," we were told. And we were also told he was as bad a person as Fidel was good and they hoped he wouldn't just takeover after Fidel passed. (Well, three years ago he did, and he wasn't bad at all.) (Continued on page 44)

All Aboard the Sea Jitney to the Hamptons!

BY JUDY S. KLINGHOFFER

It's no secret that a drive out to the Hamptons can be a stressful experience. Fighting traffic on the Long Island Expressway is not the most relaxing way to begin what should be a relaxing weekend on the East End. Weary weekend travelers will be relieved to know that just this past Memorial Day weekend, another travel option became available. The first Sea Jitney ferried passengers from locations in Connecticut, New Jersey, and New York City out to the Hamptons, combining ferry and bus service in a seamless, stress-free trip.

"Everything worked perfectly." Hampton Jitney Vice-President Andrew Lynch is pleased with the smoothness of operations on the Sea Jitney's first day of service this past Friday, May 22. "We had people coming out from NYC, from Connecticut, and from New Jersey." Passengers from all three locations (Highlands, NJ; East 35th Street, New York; and Bridgeport, CT) begin their trip with a high-speed ferry ride to Port Jefferson. From there, Hampton Jitney buses take them further east to Southampton, Sag Harbor and East Hampton. On the very first day of operation, there were over 50 reservations of Hamptonsbound travelers.

The commitment to providing hands-on quality control goes all the way to the top, Lynch explains.

'My brother, Geoff, the President of Hampton Jitney, drove one of the buses today out to East Hampton. I saw Jeff as he came through

It took no less than three different entities to make the Sea Jitney a reality—the Hampton Jitney, Seastreak, and the Bridgeport/Port Jefferson Steamboat Company. "The original idea came from Seastreak Ferry. They reached out to us. The Village of Port Jefferson was involved from the start and they were incredibly helpful." Lynch took the idea into a management meeting at Hampton Jitney, where it was met with enthusiasm. "It just made sense to look at the possibilities." The Lynchs worked with Bridgeport-Port Jefferson Ferry General Manager Fred Hall, and Seastreak President Jim Barker, to combine Seastreak's ferry service from New Jersey to New York, the Bridgeport-Port Jefferson connection and the Hampton Jitney to create the Sea Jitney, which will run on weekends throughout the season.

A trip on the Sea Jitney will run from $30 to $50, including free passage for any little ones under the age of 2. Bring your bike along for an additional $10.

It takes about 2 hours to sail from the New York to Port Jefferson, and a little more than an hour more to get out to the Hamptons, so plan on your entire trip taking about 3 and a

If you're starting your trip from New Jersey, plan on a little extra time on the ferry, about 3 hours from Highland, NJ to Port Jefferson, but you can move freely around the boat and watch the waves, which is definitely a nicer view than you'd have on the LIE, staring at the rear bumper of the car in front of you. If you're Hamptons-bound from Connecticut, the Sea Jitney will save you the inconvenience of driving to New York City before you can start the considerable jaunt out East. Figure on about two hours and 45 minutes from Bridgeport to Hamptons beaches.

No matter where you're starting out from, the aim of the Sea Jitney is just to make the trip a lot more pleasant. "The ability to be outside in the open air after a stressful day is a plus," Lynch observes. "And there is bar service and Wi-fi." There is also the pleasure of arriving for your Hamptons weekend relaxed and calm instead of frazzled and crazed. As Lynch points out, "You know, there's just no traffic on the water."

Animal Rescue Fund Celebrates All Year Long!

BY JUDY S. KLINGHOFFER

They sleep on our beas, sneu on carry star in countless YouTube videos, and hey sleep on our beds, shed on our clothes, brighten our lives in every way imaginable. There is nothing like the unconditional love pets give us, and ARF, the Animal Rescue Fund of the Hamptons, Inc., has brought that love to hundreds of Hamptons homes. In 2014 alone, ARF found homes for over a thousand cats and dogs, a number that definitely calls for celebration.

ARF has been one of the Hamptons' bestloved organizations since its beginning in 1974, a no-kill shelter that cares for animals until they find good homes. Their kennels have indoor and outdoor dog runs, and the catteries have scratching posts and screened-in porches. All of that ritzy real estate for Fluffy and Fido is payed for with private funds, largely raised at ARF's summer events.

Saturday, May 30 is the opening of ARF's Designer Showhouse. Designers, including Brian P. Brady, Jamie Drake, Kevin Hart, Tamara Magel, Mark Schryver and Peri Wolfman descend upon ARF's Thrift and Treasure Shop in Sagaponack to turn it into a designer show stopper using whatever catches their eye among the thrift shop inventory, supplementing with items from their own collections. "It's the fifth year for this event," comments Jamie Berger, Director of Marketing and Communications. "It started in 2011. We were planning to renovate our thrift shop. 15% of our income each year comes from there."

Jennifer Rockford, of Philanthropy Director adds, "The event was created to introduce a new audience to the thrift shop." For animal lovers and design fans, the ARF Designer Showhouse has a unique feature—everything is for sale, even the items coming from the designers' own collections. what differentiates this designer showhouse from others," Rockford points out. "You can buy everything!" Berger Kevin Hart and Lakshmi remarked, "The different designers have put together some unique rooms—one is on the theme of birds."

At 5 p.m. on May 30, there is an exclusive viewing for those who want to have first dibs on their favorite items. From 6 p.m. to 8 p.m., the event opens up to general admission. With 100% of the proceeds going directly to ARF, the price of admission, either for the preview hour at 5 p.m. at $250, or the general admission at 6 p.m. to 8 p.m. for $150, your purchases will go a long way to making our furry friends comfortable and happy. As an additional draw, there will be a book signing by Jorge Bendersky, author of DIY Dog Grooming, From Puppy to Best in Show: Everything you Need to Know, Step by Step. Bendersky will be donating 100% of the proceeds of his book sales at the signing to ARF. The Designer Showhouse will be open the following day, Sunday, May 31, to the general public, with a suggested $10 donation.

Saturday, June 20 is the date for ARF's much-loved garden tour. This year the focus is on the gardens of Southampton. Running from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m., rain or shine, this self-guided tour has always been extremely popular. Berger observes, "You can walk it, bike it, a lot of people come to the ARF Garden Tour from mid-island and Nassau County."

The Garden Tour concludes with a cocktail party at Blue Haven, the home of Lisa and Donald Jackson. The tour alone is $85, the tour and cocktail party is $175.

ARF will wrap up their summer season with their third annual Bow Wow Meow Ball on August 15. "It's our biggest fundraiser of the season," Rockford says. "We'll have a sit-down dinner, a vegetarian meal catered by Glorious Food, and music by Peter Duchin. We tent the grounds and we have the same design team as last year—David Monn and Alex Papachristidis. We are so excited to announce this year's honoree, [architect] Peter Marino."

The proceeds from all these events will help fuel ARF's future plans, Berger explains. "We're on the verge of another expansion." Which just means that ARF will be able to help more of our furry friends find loving homes in the

SoFo Presents First Climate Change Forum & Benefit

BY CARLA GAYNOR

The South Fork Natural History Museum (SoFo), a state-of-the-art facility nestled within the Long Pond Greenbelt system in Bridgehampton, will hold its first annual Climate Change Forum & Benefit, "Climate Change: What it Means for the East End," on June 6, from 5 p.m.-7 p.m. The event's panel will feature seven renowned environmental leaders, including Dr. Robert Stein, Peter Boyd, environmental activists Michael Gerrard, Carl Safina, and Jack Rivkin, as well as Assemblymen Fred Thiele and Steven Englebright.

The forum will focus on creative solutions relating to global climate change impacts on the East End's marine environment, mitigation (reducing greenhouse gas emissions) and adaptation. "We are hoping that attendees will become aware that climate change has potential damaging effects on our health, ecosystems, property and economy," says Frank Quevedo, Executive Director of the museum. "This event will inform attendees-based on expert opinions-how we can adapt and deal with climate change challenges. Now is the time to address these challenges before it's too late. SoFo is very excited to host this groundbreaking event focusing on the important topic of climate change," Quevedo says.

"Sea level rise and intensified storms give us with houses in our area cause for pause," says Quevedo. Whether we barricade ourselves or stage a managed retreat to higher ground, the sea isn't what it used to be. Neither is the future. What we do will come down to money and policies. But first we need the best information on what might happen, and likelihoods of it happening, so we can plan contingencies and 'what if' scenarios."

The South Fork Natural History Museum's mission is to promote interest in, advance knowledge of, and create appreciation for the natural habitat, particularly the East End of Long Island. "The East End of Long Island is the most beautiful place on Earth," says Quevedo. It offers a diversity of natural habitats such as the Atlantic Ocean, Peconic Estuary, Coastal Plain Ponds, Vernal Ponds, Oak Forests, Pine Barrens and Grasslands. All of these habitats have their own unique communities resulting in an abundance of varied wildlife." With a focus on the future of Long Island's natural habitat, the funds from the first Annual Climate Change Forum & Benefit will support new climate change programming that SoFo will launch Currently the South Fork Natural History Museum provides a range of educational programs including nature walks and events for all ages. All walks are lead by environmental specialists and include both indoor and outdoor activities utilizing SoFo's facilities while also taking advantage of its prime location on the Long Pond Greenbelt, a protected area that stretches from Bridgehampton to Sag Harbor. Speaking about the museum's belief, Quevedo commented, "It is SoFo's mission to connect children and adults to these habitats and have people discover the wonders that lie within. We are committed to teaching everyone to be responsible caretakers as we strive to preserve our ecosystems. This truly is a remarkable place that needs to be protected forever."

In addition to a cocktail reception and panel, guests have the opportunity to purchase a VIP event ticket, which will include a post-event dinner hosted by SoFo Board President Andy Sabin. Featured speakers and special guests will also be in attendance.

For general admission and VIP tickets, contact the South Fork Natural History Museum, 377 Bridgehampton/Sag Harbor Turnpike, 631-537-9735, sofodevdir@optonline.net

We sunbathed in a huge park outside Havana with lots of local families who were having picnics there. There was a river where we swam with the others, lots of flowers and birds and greenery. I thought it looked like a Walt Disney park. But everyone was enjoying themselves immensely. And the music played.

One afternoon, tens of thousands of people, mostly farmers in the backs of trucks, came into the center of Havana to demonstrate in front of the Swiss Embassy where there were a small group of American diplomats, together with about 20 American marines to protect them, who ran the "American Interests" office.

We were off at the baseball game when the demonstration took place, so we missed the two-hour harangue against America that Castro gave to his people there in front of that embassy. It was about 6-year-old Elian Gonzales, who had escaped with his mother to Florida but she had died on the wayand he had made it. The Cubans in Florida now had Elian, and they weren't giving him back to his father. We were later told that the farmers came from all around Cuba because they were paid for the day to come, and also because there was lots to eat and drink.

On another day, we were at that Swiss mission and I saw on a bulletin board a poster inviting families of the American Marines to a barbecue and softball game at their barracks out of town. I wanted very much to go, wrangled an invitation to it from the captain there, but in the end, never went.

The highlight of this trip, for me, anyway, was the visit to the home of the late Antonio Nunez Jimenez. It was a modest home on a quarter acre in downtown Havana that was now a museum to the exploits of this important man.

It was not just Fidel Castro who came down from the mountains. It was three leaders—Fidel Castro, who was 33, Che Guevara, 31, and Dr. Jimenez, who at that time was the intellectual leader of the revolution and 36.

The home was filled with his books and writings and every award he had ever received and every nametag from every meeting of the Communist Parties around the world he had ever attended. He saved everything. He was a packraf.

On a porch, there was a 25-foot-long carvedout mahogany canoe that Jimenez and a photographer had paddled with some South American natives from the headwaters of the Amazon River out into the Caribbean in 1980, when Jimenez was 57. The photographer who had been on this trip with Jimenez was present that day at the house and told us about this three-month-long journey. It was a goodwill trip. And when it ended, they rowed up alongside the string of Caribbean islands and made landfall at Puerto Rico, the American possession, or tried to. According to the photographer, the word from the Puerto Rican mainland was that everyone was welcome to land "except the two Cubans." So they paddled on and finally landed somewhere else.

My favorite thing at this home, however, was a golf scorecard that Jimenez had kept. It was from a game the three of them played, with an American, at a golf course owned by the IBM Corporation, just outside of Havana.

There had been a time, between when the rebels came down from the mountain and Castro began to talk to the Soviets, that it seemed like this new regime in Cuba might make friends with America. And so, during this interval, which lasted about ten months, there came a time when IBM executives invited Fidel and Che and Antonio to play a game of golf.

Nearby to this golf scorecard was an IBM company monthly magazine that was published after the game. A page inside showed a photo of the foursome all friendly like, standing on the green holding their clubs for the camera.

The IBM man, in his tie and jacket, is holding the grip of his club the special way that golfers do, with one hand overlinked by one finger with the other hand. The three others, all in their military uniforms, held their clubs like baseball bats.

Apparently, the Cubans never had played the game before, ever. They knew nothing of mulligans or do-overs. They counted every shot. Here were the results, in pencil, right there on the card displayed under the glass of the museum case. John Miller of IBM, 92. Fidel Castro, 138. Antonio Nuñez, 158. Che Guevara, 122.

It's been two generations since the American government announced the embargo against this tiny nation. I can understand why they did it, although punishing the people to get them to throw out their new leaders is a pretty bad idea in my opinion. It's long since time it was ended. And now, as the two countries come near to establishing full diplomatic relations, it has.

hether the summer season draws you to the Hamptons or you call the East End home year-round, the allure of our area is undeniable. Against a backdrop of the world's most beautiful homes and most breathtaking vistas, we've brought together some of the most influential real estate experts and insiders to reveal what they find most inspiring about being right here, right now in the East End real estate market.

"Personally for me it is the opportunity to see incredible and diverse architecture from three centuries sitting side by side surrounded by astonishingly beautiful nature. In the last couple of weeks I have swooned over a staircase in a Stanford White designed home at Whitefields condominiums in Southampton and been overjoyed to visit Andrew Geller's iconic Pearlroth House—the 'Double Diamond'—on Dune Road in Westhampton, which has been moved and incredibly restored by the family. To see the stewardship and restoration of these historic homes alongside the construction of super modern homes that complement one another allows us to enjoy a unique and special place in the world.

Professionally, my inspiration stems from working with people who want to spend time in the Hamptons during the season or to live here year-round in order to find the perfect home for them. The feeling when you recognize you have found them 'the one' gives me an enormous amount of satisfaction—and then to see them making changes or simply refurnishing or decorating to put their personal stamp on a home."

Maz Crotty, Licensed Associate Real Estate Broker, Nest Seekers International

"The most inspiring aspect of working in the real estate market out here is the privilege of experiencing such beauty. Our 'product' is nature that's been 'improved'—or not—by manmade structures. Our inventory includes world renowned properties. Our clientele are some of the brightest people in the world. I truly feel blessed to have been able to spend my working years in this industry, in this unique place under these circumstances. Since I am a perpetual student of life, I have bought, sold, renovated, built-from-scratch, designed homes, subdivided land, owned and developed commercial real estate, and continue to do so in 'good markets' and 'bad markets'... I believe in what I do, I practice what I preach and frankly there are no bad markets—they are simply buying opportunities. One suggestion, though, is to never over-leverage or you can become a casualty of the next market swing."

-Judi Desiderio, CEO, Town & Country Real Estate

"We work and play in one of the most beautiful locations in the world. What could be better? As a real estate broker, we visit beautiful homes, meet accomplished and interesting people, and if we work really hard and are lucky, sell and rent homes. Each day I go for an early morning walk on the beach. You never know what to expect or what you will find. It is a lot like East End real estate. Everchanging, ever challenging, and I wouldn't have it any other way."

-Alan Schnurman, Licensed Associate Real Estate Broker, Saunders & Associates

"There are many inspiring aspects to working in the East End real estate market. I've always been a helper. So when I listen to the buyer's, or seller's, wants and needs and then I'm able to help bring their expectations to fruition, it simply rocks my socks. And to be able to do this in one of the most enchanting and beautiful places on the planet is sublime. How does one describe the majesty and magnificence of the sun setting on Peconic Bay?"

-John Christopher, Licensed Associate Real Estate Broker, Brown Harris Stevens of the Hamptons, LLC

"I love real estate because every day, month and year is different. This year we were slipping and sliding showing homes in the freezing-cold ice and snow, while the year before we became busy a little later, but it was still a great year. Being in the business for the last 15 years, I'm always surprised! Ours is a unique market: we're a luxury, not a necessity, so searching for the perfect second or third home is a lot more fun and challenging—it's similar to being a matchmaker. It's such a joy to always be near the ocean and bay. Our air smells different with its wonderful clean, salty smell—really indescribable, but you feel so wonderful! Taking a walk on the beach with my pup—kayaking on the bay or just listening to the sound of the crashing waves could make anyone smile and decompress—there's nothing like it!"

-Lynn November, Licensed Associate Real Estate Broker, Douglas Elliman

"The most inspiring thing for me about working in East End real estate is the people. I have met and helped so many different people selling and finding the right property and making so many relationships and good friendships along the way. It's very rewarding and nothing means more than the trust and confidence they have in me."

-Susan Breitenbach, Licensed Associate Real Estate Broker, The Corcoran Group

"I have to say that being born here and being able to raise my daughters has been most inspiring for me. I have been fortunate enough to be in an industry that has allowed me to be independent. I am free to work and enjoy this beautiful place."

—Theresa Eurell, Licensed Real Estate Salesperson, Town and Country Real Estate

"The most inspiring aspect of working in the East End real estate market is both personal and professional. It is the personal relationships that I have developed over the years with my clients, along with my own love of the East End, that motivates me professionally. Despite the challenges that come with each and every deal, I truly love what I do. I have been blessed to meet so many amazing people who started out as customers and clients but have become friends. Change is emotional for people and I do my best to make the process something my clients can have fun with as they become excited about starting the next chapter of their lives. Instead of trying to 'sell' anyone on anything, I focus my energy on understanding the clients' needs and desires, then helping them decide the best way to bring those desires to life.

I truly believe in this paradise I live and work in. It is from that passion that comes my inspiration to share that with the wonderful people I have the pleasure of working with."

Donielle Cardinale, Licensed Associate Real Estate Broker, Daniel Gale Sotheby's International Realty

"What inspires me personally and what I can professionally share with buyers, renters and visitors is the 'Valuable Lifestyle' you can have year round, renting, or just on a short visit. What inspires me most are the many different cultures of the East End which are transmitted through many languages, customs and beliefs. Our beaches are rated in the top 10 in the world. Restaurants differ and offer a wide range of menu choices whether you enjoy dining out or ordering in. The local farmers markets are a great inspiration to all in eating healthy. Music and art are everywhere keeping the heart and soul alive with pleasures.

What also continues to inspire me working in this real estate market is when buyers, sellers and renters arrive and you are witness to the change in mindset. They leave their ties and suits behind and come to the East End to rejuvenate with families and friends. They bring great energy, and I love how magically the clean air and bright light of the East End welcomes and beckons them to spend their time here."

RELATIVE MATTERS

written by andrew m. lieb, esq., mph

s summer rental season in the Hamptons moves into high gear with Memorial Day weekend in the rear-view mirror, a question I was asked seems particularly timely.

"My nephew just graduated from college, and when I asked him what he would like for graduation he replied that he'd really love it if he could stay at my Hamptons house until my tenants come the first weekend of July. While I'd love to say yes, I'm worried that he may get too comfortable and will never leave, as he hasn't even started to interview for his first job. How can I be sure that he will leave before the tenants arrive?"

The answer depends on two important factors. First, do you need the money from your summer rental? Second, is your nephew actually your legal nephew? If you are counting on rental income to support your property, you cannot let your nephew stay at your place, even for the weekend. If you need that money to pay your bills and your nephew doesn't leave, your act of letting him stay will jeopardize your livelihood. Remember that your creditors do not care about your family. Be responsible first and take care of your obligations—your nephew is not your creditors' problem.

Now, if you don't need the money but merely want the money (meaning that you don't rely upon the funds to pay your bills), let's discuss what may happen if your nephew just won't leave. For starters, just assume that your nephew isn't a regal nephew at all and is instead just your good friend's child whom you call your "nephew"—so he will be treated as an ordinary individual using your property. In that situation, what happens when a tenant/licensee just won't leave?

First, do you have a written lease? If you do and you act promptly after the tenant holds over, you will have to file a petition in your local village/town court and get what is called a Warrant of Eviction in order to get him out by way of a court action called a summary proceeding. Then, you will have to wait until the sheriff is good and ready to pull him out by his ear, which in the end can take several months and cost a lot of money, including court fees, attorneys' fees, sheriff fees and moving company fees to remove his personal belongings.

If you don't act immediately with that petition, then you will have to mail him what is called a 30 Day Notice to Quit to first terminate his tenancy before you start with the petition, which will tack on at least an additional month to get him out. Failure to act quickly at the end of the term of a written rental agreement automatically converts that term rental into a month-to-month tenancy, which needs to be ended prior to starting the eviction proceeding. So, either way it will take a while.

On the other hand, if you are trying to evict a true family member and you resort to a summary proceeding, it will likely be dismissed by the court. Instead, you will end up in a prolonged action, called an Ejectment Proceeding in the Supreme Court. Those months to get a non-family member out may become years in an Ejectment Proceeding, which is a much more complex and costly proceeding.

The reason you will need to go the ejectment route is that you generally can't evict a family member in a summary fashion. This is because a family member's right to use the property stems from a true family relationship and not from mere permission to use the property—this is why you want to let your nephew stay in your home in the first place, and courts know this fact. You can avoid this problem by getting a written lease, granting exclusive possession and collecting rent from your nephew. As a result, it will become clear to the court that you are not just helping a family member, but are instead renting him your property.

So, you can let him stay if you don't need the money from the rental to pay your bills. However, it's never easy to get a tenant to leave who doesn't want to go, and it's impermissible to simply lock him out. To mitigate your exposure, use a written lease and have him pay rent. But remember, no good deed goes unpunished. Perhaps you should get him a smartwatch instead.

Pamela Glazer Architect: Green Is Beautiful

written by Sharon Feiereisen

rchitecture is a field dominated by men. As a matter of fact, Southampton-based architect Pamela Glazer was one of only six women in a class of 121 when she studied architecture at the University of Maryland. This makes it all the more impressive that Glazer has risen to prominence as one of the East End's most sought-after architects. She is known for her impeccable aesthetic with a focus on ecologically sound buildings. Glazer's work is characterized by clean lines and a bold use of color. LEED certified and a member of Long Island Green, Glazer builds environmental responsibility into all her work.

Glazer begins with a visit to your Hamptons home, where she takes in how you and your family live—simple things, like setting a table, doing the laundry, how you arrange yourself to watch television or to listen to music. Glazer knows how important it is for your family to be comfortable and at ease.

We spoke with Glazer to find out more about her background and her earth-friendly designs.

What is it about Hamptons architecture that you find particularly appealing?

It's not a particular architecture in the Hamptons that appeals to me, but the special light and views that give inspiration to design. There is a unique sea level elevation that projects out into the Atlantic Ocean 110 miles and gives us full light from sunrise to sunset. Almost every site has a special view to focus on, whether it's a dramatic view of the water, a farm field or a neighbor's 150-year-old tree. It inspires great architecture whether it's classic or modern or somewhere in between.

Tell us about the latest in green design and what works for Hamptons builders and homeowners right now?

The most important green design element is proper orientation of the house on the property. My pet peeve is a poorly sited house. I cannot stand it when a house does not address the property it sits on. So often a house ignores the view, the sun and the neighbors. At no additional cost to the owner or the builder, the siting of the house is the single most important green design element that we can utilize. Orient the house to insure plenty of use of sun while providing protection from the cold and damaging north winds during the winter months. In the summer months, the hot sun can be controlled with louvers, trellises or overhangs to provide comfortable conditions inside and out.

Are there differences in the way green concepts are used in larger homes as compared to smaller homes?

The same green concepts are offered for small and large homes—solar electric, geothermal heating and cooling. There seems to be a trend to reduce the footprint of the house.

How can homeowners best minimize their environmental footprint?

Consider building a more modest footprint, use less electricity (LED lighting throughout) less heating and cooling, use recycled or sustainable materials and reforested lumber.

What are some examples of green design that can be incorporated into an historic structure?

I love the geo-thermal heating and cooling system. The idea of using the constant 55° temperature of the earth to heat and cool instead of oil or gas is fantastic. Awnings can be used for sun control. Pergolas and trellises also can be used to decrease direct heat gain from the sun in the summer. There are other environmental considerations that don't have anything to do with the house. I prefer to see less lawn and more natural vegetation especially for waterfront property. I say this because weed killers and insecticides used to maintain grass go into the soil and overtime leach into the water table, and eventually into the drinking water, as well as into our beautiful local bays and creeks. I think we should all strive to address universal environmental concerns in addition to our own personal concerns. The first step and way that we can all contribute to this is to evaluate our own personal spaces, determine what we really need and take steps to conserve the earth we all share.

What's your most memorable eco amenity?

The most memorable amenity would have to be a swimming pool system that required no chemicals at all. It was the first one on the East Coast. The designer of the system came from California to build it using ozone and copper. The pool water was cleaner than bottled water.

Have you always had an interest in architecture?

Growing up I was interested in studio art, but having a practical mother, I had to be employable after graduation. I excelled in math so I applied to architecture school. On a school trip to New York, I fell in love with the city and decided to move there after graduation. My first housing experience was low income, multiunit buildings in the most impoverished neighborhoods. I think this taught me how to understand the absolute essentials required to make a home.

What architectural trends do you see taking shape this summer?

The biggest trend for this summer will be the fire pit because it is accessible to everyone. They can be handmade or purchased; gas- or wood-fueled. Also, the outside living area is popular with modern houses that have entire walls of operable glass, which beautifully integrates the inside and outside spaces when desired.

What are your favorite design details?

I am a bath person, so I like to project the bathtub area out past the outside wall so that there is glass on three sides of the freestanding tub. It makes the most sense when there is a view, and you feel like you are bathing outside in the sun or in the snow.

What should people keep in mind when beginning a big project?

People should keep in mind that the house is for them and how they live, not how their friends or neighbors live.

What are some of your most memorable projects?

The Cowfish Restaurant outside bar on the Shinnecock Canal. Designing a "nonbuilding" on the water, which has to withstand hurricane winds, provided a novel situation. There were no walls to provide lateral support and the bar needed to be locked up and watertight, as well as being fun.

Also, my own house in Shinnecock Hills. This was an opportunity to design in the elements that were exciting to me and to incorporate old building parts that I have collected over the years. When it was finished, it had every feeling I wanted in my home.

This Week's Cover Artist: Keith Mantell

BY JOAN BAUM

Back again, after his boldcolored fantasy painting "Snack Time" for the May 1 Dan's Papers cover, Keith Mantell celebrates East End wine country with "Eastern Vines," a 12" x 16" oil on canvas. With its soft hues, kind of variations on a theme in green, it comes across in the cropped cover version as more angled than in the full painting. In the full version, a light pink-streaked blue sky imitates in form the triangular mass of vines that zigzag back toward a triangular mass of trees and the horizon line. On the cover, however, the concentrated vines assume more importance, and the more dominant greens ironically suggest a notunwelcome spring scene. Because "Eastern Vines" was done early in Mantell's restarted artistic career in 2007, and seems so different in style, subject matter, technique and mood from "Snack Time," it prompted a question about what telltale signs might nonetheless be detected in the earlier work. The answer was "vintage" (pun intended) Mantell: "In this case, the only sign would be the signature... hopefully, I've developed like a fine wine."

Your plein air work seems to get more impressionistic with time, showing separate brushstrokes that define leaves and shadows. You also seem to like green, and use various hues to create sunny, upbeat scenes. Not to suggest that dim or gloomy is the way to go, but have you ever, as they say, depicted the world as through a glass darkly?

I did a lot of vineyard scenes when I started because I saw that they sold—people like them. I still do vineyards but also minimalist abstracts. I do have a dark side, but I'm not putting it out there. Yes, I have been getting more impressionistic with the landscapes, but I love every area of art.

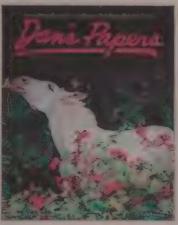

Do you use Photoshop to capture first images?

I tend not to, and certainly not in "Eastern Vines," which is totally en plein air. I spend a whole day with a scene, and at the end of the day, it is what it is, no manipulation, which, for me, would screw up the essence of the work, the spontaneity. "Eastern Vines" is kind of foggy because that's what I saw. I get into my groove around 2 p.m. and will often start switching brushes from one hand to the other, finding my way. Much of that discovery is feel when I find myself putting paint down with more force. Although I know where I went to do "Eastern Vines," the exact location doesn't matter. What I see, I lay in first, initial strokes that set the value or tone of the painting to come. As for greens, I love viridian green, it has good body, and sap green, which is more translucent, deeper, darker, and guides me to lay down the darks.

In 2013 you were invited to join Plein Air Peconic. What contributions to art and artists do you think such a group makes?

Plein Air Peconic, now in its 10th year, is affiliated with the Peconic Land Trust, an organization conservation. The mission of the trust expresses the same regard for land and nature that attracted the abstract expressionists who came out here in the middle of the last century. Regardless of artistic style, all artists share this vision of conserving and preserving the land. I'm pleased to be representing the North Fork as a member of Plein Air Peconic. The organization holds special exhibitions, which ensure that members can get their artwork Keith Mantell's previous Dan's cover seen by the public and, of course, we hope, bought. A percentage of proceeds from sales goes to the trust.

Mantell's work can be seen online at Keithmantellfineart. com. Martell is a regular exhibitor at the Fitzgerald Gallery in Westhampton and at the South Street Gallery in Greenport. In June he will have several 5" x 7" pieces in a group show at The Watermill Museum. Visit keithmantell.com for more images and info.

Shape Up: What's New in Hamptons Fitness

BY KELLY LAFFEY

Memorial Day weekend has passed, and with it summer in the Hamptons is in full swing! It's officially bathing suit season, but if your beach bod isn't quite what you want it to be, the East End has a number of gyms and fitness classes guaranteed to whip you into shape. Here's what's new for summer 2015.

((305)) Fitness has brought its party to The Surf Lodge in Montauk. Deemed "rave-meets-workout" this 55-minute cardio experience infuses dance moves, sports drills and high intensity interval training to create a full-body workout. Each class features a live DJ, light show and the opportunity to burn over 800 calories. For more info, visit 305fitness.com.

CityRow is coming to the Montauk Beach House. The low-impact workout alternates intervals of cardio and sculpting on and off of WaterRowers to deliver a triple threat: high-intensity sweat, low-impact burn and total body results. CityRow's row machines are unique in that they use water to create dynamic resistance, which mimics the sensation of a boat rowing through water. For more info, visit cityrow.com.

East End Mermaid classes, which combine yoga and live music, began this spring at new studio Well Within in East Hampton, and they'll also be held at Swallow East in Montauk and Lisa's Lovely Organics in East Hampton. Yoga instructor Jenna Raynell and musician Joe Van Asco play off of each other during the classes, allowing collaborations to happen organically. Follow @EastEndMermaid on Instagram for announcements of pop-up classes! For more info, visit eastendmermaid.com.

Back for a second summer, Elements Fitness Studio, 66 Newtown Lane, Suite 11, East Hampton, has an updated class schedule and a new retail boutique in the redesigned studio. Are You Smarter Than an Islander?

BY SALLY FLYNN

Fox is bringing back the show Are You Smarter Than a Fifth Grader. I love that show. I can guess about half the questions on Jeopardy! and about a third of the questions on fifth graders.

It would be fun to have a show called, "Can You Live on Shelter Island?" Here's a sample of the questions:

1. When two pickup trucks, traveling in opposite directions, stop in the middle of the road and the drivers start talking to each other, how long do you wait before beeping your horn? Answer: One minute. And if they ignore you, how long do you wait until you get out of your car to ask them to move? Answer: largely depends on the weather. If it's not raining get out 30 seconds after you hit the horn. If it is raining, move your car forward until your bumper gently taps theirs. You also have the option of yelling out your window at this time. None of these methods have ever been effective in getting pickup drivers to move, but it does make you feel good just to make the effort.

2. Describe three methods to keep raccoons out of your garbage cans. None of these can include easy fixes like surrounding the cans with motion sensors and electrified razor wire.

3. When a tourist staggers into an establishment clutching his chest and describing how he just hit a deer, what is the first thing you do? Call 911? Wrong. First, you find out where he hit the deer and call a friend to pick up that fresh venison! Then you call 911. Priorities are important on Shelter Island.

4. How long do you have to know someone before you can ask them to loan you a ferry ticket? You see, if you live on the Island, you can get ferry tickets at a discount and they are as good as cash. And the answer is, if this person has invited you to a barbecue or clam bake at least once, then you qualify as knowing them well enough to bum a ferry ticket. Just remember, it's not like bumming a cigarette. You are expected to return the ticket or its value in a timely manner. You should be careful about bumming too many tickets off the same person because if you owe an individual three or more tickets they are entitled to ask you for free babysitting or help re-roofing their house, or digging a new pit for a septic tank, or any other household task.

5. Since there are no franchise chain stores here, everything is family-owned and operated. Is it acceptable to close a store early because the blue fish are running? Answer: absolutely yes! We're talking about bluefish here, not lobster, which you can get anytime. Fresh bluefish baked in stewed tomatoes with lemon and seasoning is one of the four basic food groups on Shelter Island. The other three food groups are clams, crabs and beer.

6. How long can you avoid telling your friends you have a new boat and still have them remain your friends? This is a delicate question because not telling your friends you have a new boat is like not telling them you have a new baby. They will eventually find out and when they do they will ask "Why didn't you tell me?" And you will offer the lame excuse of, "I just wanted to enjoy it by myself for a while." This is an unacceptable excuse. Don't be surprised if, when you ask for help fixing up the boat, your friends will hold out on you for punishment. Some people can hold out for two, sometimes three hours. Don't forget the ancient unwritten nautical law "To help fix up a boat is to be invited for a boat ride." This law was unwritten One of the basic food groups all the way to biblical times. When Noah built the Ark, he didn't ask neighbors for help, because he'd have to had offer them a boat ride.

7. What should you bring with you on the ferry to ensure Santa's elves will see you and put you down for a good toy at Christmas? Answer: In hot weather bring an ice-cold drink for the ticket-taker. In cold weather, bring hot chocolate or coffee. And if you really want a good present from Santa, bring Irish coffee.

Summer begins

Chef David Picante of Gosman's in Montauk

BY KELLY LAFFEY

ikely the most iconic restaurant in Montauk, Gosman's is famous for its fresh seafood—especially the lobster. Chef David Picante, who will be on-hand at Dan's Taste of Two Forks, agrees that everyone should try it, steamed or broiled, at least once in their life. "Put on a lobster bib and have at it!" he says. Here, Picante discusses the bounty of Gosman's seafood and his favorite local ingredients.

What are you most looking forward to about being part of Dan's Taste of Summer this year?

The night itself, i.e., the vibe, the tents with all its action, and the people who are enjoying my home.

One food everyone should try at least once in life:

Steamed or broiled lobster at Gosman's. Put on a lobster bib and have at it!

If you were to eat at your restaurant as a guest, what would you order?

Steamers, chowder and the local fish specials

Describe the adrenaline of working in a Hamptons kitchen.

No one understands how hard it is to find good staff in a seasonal restaurant, and then get them ready for what comes during holiday weekends.

Surfcasting: A Great Catch in Montauk

BY STEPHANIE KOSSMAN

et ready for another season of surfcasting on the beautiful shores of the East End.

Surfcasting, or "surf fishing," is the sport of fishing as you wade in the water from the shore. "We're blessed here on Long Island. There is so much opportunity for surfcasting," says Bill Wetzel, a licensed surfcasting guide who operates primarily out of Montauk. "It's the surfcasting capital of the world."

While surfcasting may seem simple, there's actually plenty to learn about the sport. Knowing some basic do's and don'ts could mean the difference between catching a fish and coming up empty-handed. Luckily, expert Bill Wetzel has offered us his expertise.

The first thing to keep in mind about surfcasting, Wetzel reminds us, is that there are many different types. You may picture yourself standing on the glistening shores of Montauk in the summer sun, but this is only one way to surf fish. In addition to sand beaches, jetties and marshes are also prime locations for surfcasting. No matter where you choose to fish, however, get familiar with the location before casting your rod. Some beaches will be much more accessible than others.

Once you've decided on a location, you're also going to have to know how to "read the water." At low tide, survey the water for how the current moves and what's beneath the surface. Deeper areas with more shells will provide you with more fish.

Equally as important as knowing where you're fishing is knowing what you're fishing: striped bass. Because striped bass are nocturnal feeders, "your prime time to fish will be between 1 and 3 a.m.," Wetzel advises. "Stripers are cold blooded, and because their body temperature equalizes with the water temperature, they don't like those hot daytime temperatures of the water."

Fishing during the daytime won't be impossible, however, especially if you're out during the spring months. Between May and June, you'll do well during the daytime, but the fish will be smaller. You won't catch the legendary 50-pounder, and "that's the big one," says Wetzel.

It's the summer months, July and August, when you'll really see a decline in your catch rate during the day. "August water temperatures reach mid-70s, so that time of year you have to fish at night." If you're looking to catch striped bass during these months, you'll need to be standing on the jetties in the middle of the night, getting beat up by the waves: a much different type of surf fishing, but fun nonetheless.

As for equipment, you'll need a decent rod and reel, lures, buck pails, waders, and a rain top. "I always recommend a decent set-up," Wetzel says. "You're looking to spend about 500 bucks, and that's just to get started. You can certainly find less expensive equipment, but you're not going to catch anything and you'll get frustrated." You'll be able to find all of your equipment at any local bait and tackle stores. "Ask them questions," Wetzel encourages, "they're really helpful."

Even with the help of tackle shops, this may all sound a little overwhelming, especially for beginners. If so, licensed guides like Bill Wetzel are here to help. "I've been guiding for over 15 years and will take anyone out. For complete beginners, we'll go over everything, including winds, tides, and migrations. I will even take people out who can go hardcore." Wetzel can guide anywhere on the East End and equipment is provided.

Wetzel also offers a subscription-based service,

The stripers are running!

the Surf Rats Ball Forums, for updated fishing logs, tips, forums, and tournament information. The Surf Rats Ball Striper Tournament running throughout June is the only striper tournament on the East Coast that covers the entire striper coast and makes catch and release possible.

Following the June tournament is the "The Shin Dig," on July 18, an award ceremony for the tournament's winners. The event will feature a barbeque, ice cream, children's activities, raffles, and prizes. The Shin Dig will be held from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. at Tight Lines Tackle in Sag Harbor and proceeds will benefit Kids Need More, a nonprofit dedicated to serving children, young adults and families who have experienced life-threatening illness or trauma.

Gateway's "Rock of Ages" Is Electrifying

BY GENEVIEVE HORSBURGH

ringing summer back to Bellport with a bang and lots of big hair is Rock of Ages—a stunner of a production! From beginning to end, this musical will have you singing and clapping along with over 25 of the best songs that rocked the '80s.

The show is set in 1987 on LA's infamous Sunset Strip, in the Bourbon Room bar. Genson Blimline, a native Long Islander fresh off Broadway's run of Rock of Ages, reprises his role of Lonny Barnett for Gateway. Blimline is on point the entire performance with comedic timing that is uproarious and vocals worthy of a rock star. Lonny and Dennis Dupree (played by Justin Colombo) are side-splittingly funny, and had the audience roaring during their duet "Can't Fight This Feeling."

We meet Drew Boley, a busboy at the Bourbon Room from South Detroit who dreams of becoming a rock star, and Sherrie Christian, a small-town girl from Kansas who aspires to be a famous actress. Drew, played by the adorable and talented Anthony Festa, falls instantly for the pretty blonde, played by powerhouse Emily Behny. Festa's vocals are exactly what I expect from a rocker, and he is completely convincing as the love-struck and naturally talented rock star Drew. In "I Wanna Rock" you can feel his passion for music in each note, and in "I've Been Waiting for a Girl" we can feel him falling hard for Sherrie. As our Sherrie, Behny is at first a bit reserved and demure, but once she hits those high, powerful notes like the ones in "Harden my Heart," the small town girl from Kansas seems to disappear before our eyes as Sherrie blossoms into a world-hardened woman.

Behind the scenes a German father-son duo bribes the mayor to sell the Sunset Strip to the dismay of the mayor's former assistant Regina, played by Kelly Felthous. Felthous might play a secondary character, but her vocals are anything but! She brings the house down with "We're Not Gonna Take It" and she handles the German builder's son Franz- played by a hysterical Michael Lorzexceedingly well and in the end, helps save the Sunset Strip. Keep an eye on these twothey're show stealers!

In an effort to make some Emily Behny as Sherri money and help save the Sunset Drew in Rock Of Ages Strip, Dupree hatches the idea to invite (blackmail) rock star Stacee Jaxx to perform his last show with the group Arsenal before they disband. This, of course, happens on the eve of Drew and Sherrie's first real date, where Drew stupidly blows his shot with Sherrie. Feeling rejected, Sherrie runs into the arms of the slimy, but handsome and rich (and famous) Stacee Jaxx, and the two end up hooking up in the men's room as Drew opens the show for Arsenal. The proverbial crap hits the fan when Drew finds out what Sherrie did. Stacee Jaxx demands Dupree fire Sherrie, and it looks as though our love story has ended. Will Act II change this?

A real coup for Gateway was the last minute addition of Blondie's lead guitarist, Tommy Kessler, as the onstage lead guitar player for the show. Kessler has played in Rock of Ages since its Off-Broadway days, and has taken a three-week break off the national tour to appear in Gateway's rock star production.

Rock of Ages lives up to its name, as it will literally rock your world.

The cast is sexy and sensational, bringing to life an era of badass and bad hair, with vocals that left me stunned and grinning from ear to ear. YES. Gateway and summer are back!

Don't miss "Rock of Ages" playing at the Gateway Playhouse in Bellport through June 6. For tickets visit gatewayplayhouse.org. Coming up this summer from Gateway: "Nice Work if You Can Get It" from June 10–June 27, "Sister Act" July 1-July 18, "Billy Elliot" from July 22–August 8 (at the Patchogue Theater), "Saturday Night Fever" from August 26–September 12.

Out of the Burger Joint and Into the World

BY EMILY J. WEITZ

The jam session at Bay Burger in Sag Harbor has become a mainstay on the music scene, with its Thursday Night Live band inviting musicians from near and far to join them on the Oriental rug rolled out in the corner of the restaurant. The bar is high: this is no open-mic night. This is a core group of professional musicians, and if you want to get up there with your instrument, you best know how to play.

This core group, which started with drummer Claes Brondal and an idea, has become a trio: Peter Weiss on bass, Wayne Sabella on keyboard and Brondal

"There's no jam session without the house band," says Brondal. "Since the conception of the jam, I knew there had to be a house band to provide a consistent backing for whoever wanted to come down and play."

The Thursday Night Live Band is headed out into the world to kick off Jazz en Plein Air at the Parrish Art Museum in Water Mill on May 29.

The house band evolved organically, from the musicians who were committed to showing up and the ones whose musical styles inspired one another and gelled together. As a result, these three have a great dynamic, with a healthy balance of structure and freedom.

"Often bands get together in the jazz world," says

Brondal, "and they play concerts without rehearsing a whole lot. People can't afford to rehearse. The strength of a band used to be that they played a lot and toured a lot and became like family. But there are a lot of guns for hire now."

The nice thing about the jam session, he explains, is that these three have a weekly commitment to each other, and there's no pressure. In some ways, it's like an open practice session where they can explore musically. And that's a lot of fun to watch.

"The jam session is a weekly gig," says Brondal, "playing hundreds of concerts together, and we've developed a very tight band that's unusual. We become so confident in what we do that we take it out and about. We feel we have something to say."

That's why the Thursday Night Live Band is headed out into the world to kick off the Jazz en Plein Air series at the Parrish Art Museum in Water Mill on Friday, May 29. This series was organized by Richard Siegler and features world-class musicians on the last Friday of each month throughout the summer.

"I wanted to acknowledge the contribution that Claes and John [Landes] have made to the jazz scene out here," says Siegler.

The evening will be a showcase of the jam session, which means it will reflect the experience an audience would get at Bay Burger on a Thursday evening. There will be three special guests who have been committed jammers since the inception of the jam: Ada Rovatti on tenor sax, Morris Goldberg on alto sax and penny whistle, and Baron Lewis on trumpet.

"All three of these musicians have helped to propel the jam session to where it is today," says Brondal, "quality-wise and in terms of playing and supporting the jam by showing up."

Each of these musicians brings his/her own influences to the table. Rovatti comes from Italy, Lewis is from the US, and Goldberg is from South Africa.

"They each have different takes and approaches to music," says Brondal, "and we're trying to showcase the diversity of jazz."

The hope is that, by playing at the Parrish, people who wouldn't ordinarily witness this group will see what kind of high quality music is happening every week, for the cost of a burger or a beer. The Jam Session is a non-profit organization, and any donations and support they receive goes back to the mission of supporting live music.

"The mission is to preserve jazz by playing it before a live audience," says Brondal, "and for the music to reflect the culture in present day society."

The Thursday Night Live Band will kick off the Jazz en Plein Air Series on the patio at the Parrish on Friday, May 29 from 6 to 8 pm, and attendance is free with museum admission. parrishart.org

Poetic Novel About Aliens, Questioning Reality

BY JOAN BAUM

Eleanor Lerman's odd, compelling novel Radiomen, published by Sag Harbor's The Permanent Press, can lay claim to showing its author's skill as a poet. Especially in its bleak descriptions of abandoned stretches of Rockaway Beach and industrial Queens—empty lots, old summer bungalows in ruin, the "remnants of building foundations looking like jagged concrete teeth rising out of the sandy soil." Lerman knows how to create original similes that effectively convey the ominous and depressed mood of this strange but absorbing tale. "One by one, like nails being pulled from a great, dark wall, dawn was beginning to remove the stars from the sky."

ELEANOR LERMAN

Though the narrative proves engaging-Lerman knows how to set up suspense-it's the unconventional subject matter that proves most intriguing. Radiomen brings together an unlikely assortment of people and situations-a skeptical talk radio host, a series of dogs who seem human, shadowy presences that may be aliens, a malevolent psychic, hitmen, a West African professor of French literature—all seen through the eyes of the middleaged narrator, Laurie Perzin, who bartends the night shift at Kennedy Airport. Laurie, who had a lonely childhood and then a rootless hippie life, is aimless, uncommitted: "if there was anything I was really good at, it was finding ways to avoid what I didn't want to think about." Still, she's sharply observant, reliable and sensitive to the plight of others.

Half bombed on wine one night, she calls in to a radio show. The program host's mission is to debunk the supernatural. A psychic is on, Ravenette, who seems to know that Laurie will call in. Hardnosed, independent, indifferent to potential danger, Laurie nonetheless is curious enough to meet with Ravenette, who turns out to be a key player in a cult called Blue Awareness, a group that traces mankind's beginning to an ancient alien race that evolved into Dogon culture (in what is now Mali). The cult founder, now dead, left his mantle to his son, a Jim Jones kind of character who brainwashes acolytes into promoting and protecting the cult, by all means. The Blues say they are superior beings, chosen by the ghosts of the ancient culture to channel future mankind.

It seems that Laurie's uncle Avi, long dead, was a genius electrical engineer who taught his young niece a bit about radio technology. One night, when Laurie was six and living on the Rockaway Peninsula, Avi was working on getting signals from other ham operators and picked up an odd trace. He left Laurie for a few moments to go to the roof to adjust an antenna. In his absence, Laurie thinks she may have seen a shadowy, faceless presence come near the radio and fiddle with the dials. How could that be? The "radioman" must have been a dream. When Avi comes back, he asks Laurie if she moved the dials. She says no, but mentions nothing about the shadowy figure. This memory or dream or hallucination haunts Laurie and it comes back with a vengeance after she meets Ravenette. The psychic tells Laurie that an engram, a false memory, has stayed with her all her life and must be purged in order for her to move ahead.

To confuse matters even further, an African neighbor whom Laurie befriends comes to thank her, by way of giving her a rare breed of dog-an animal that traces its ancestry to the Dogon culture. The dog will be one of several who mysteriously appear to protect Laurie. Could it be that there really are beings from another time, another place? And could it also be that they want to return whence they came, rather than instruct the Blues? In any case, the Blues become increasingly menacing the more Laurie tries to figure out what happened that night long ago in Rockaway. A tough, self-aware rationalist, Laurie finds herself straddling the worlds of the psychological and the paranormal. Radiomen may be science fiction, but it's hardly a predictable or typical example of the genre. It may well appeal to those who think they never would read such pop lit and enjoy it.

TOMORROWLAND

George Clooney stars as genius scientist Frank Walker and Britt Robertson is Casey Newton, a young woman who accidentally discovers what Clooney is up to. It has something to do with time travel or an alternate universe—a magical, superadvanced place that becomes accessible through touching a small transponder: Tomorrowland. The film is a kind of riff on The Wizard of Oz, although obviously filtered through a bright-eyed, optimistic, Magic Kingdom mentality (this is a Disney picture, after all, and the original Tomorrowland is a district of Disneyworld—I mention that in case you're one of the seven people who didn't know it already). Tomorrowland could pull off a pretty neat trick for Disney. Because we all know that Walt Disney's vision for the future, as evidenced by Disneyworld's Tomorrowland and by EPCOT, never did come to pass. Very few of us live in geodesic domes, few of us have traveled to outer space, and very few get around on monorails. As a result, Tomorrowland at the Magic Kingdom and EPCOT have come to be kind of ironic repositories of gee-whiz '60s futurism. But what if, as the film Tomorrowland suggests, Disney's vision DID come to pass, and we just aren't able to see it? The film could serve to reboot the theme park without Disney having to change any Tomorrowland details at all. Those Disney folks are pretty sneaky.

POLTERGEIST

There are lots of reasons to NOT do a remake of Poltergeist. For starters, the 1982 original is a modernday classic-how could it not be when it features the freaky Zelda May Rubinstein as the psychic medium Tangina Barrons ("Go into the light!")? You're not going to find another Zelda May. Then there's a technical issue: in the original, the daughter first senses the presence of the poltergeists through the snow on the TV screen—that which you used to see if you turned on the TV in the middle of the night after the stations ended their broadcasts. Well, snow doesn't appear any more with such regularity, so in the new film they have to settle for a wildly malfunctioning TV, which is a touch on the nose because it's too obvious-you wouldn't need any special clairvoyance to know something strange was happening if your TV was going that berserk. Then there's the well-known Poltergeist curse—the unhappy fates that befell some of the actors in the original film. Look it up. I could go on. Apparently, the makers of the new Poltergeist feel that there's a good reason to update the film to the present day and fill it with all of the horror gimmicks that have appeared since 1982. Will audiences agree?

Wining and Winning on the East End

BY SHARON FEIEREISEN

TheEastEndmaybearelatively small patch of land, but it's home to some of the country's most prominent wineries. One of the most prominent, Wölffer, will be opening the first winery-owned restaurant on Long Island. Wölffer Kitchen is located at 29 Main Street in Sag Harbor and will serve modern American eats with a Mediterranean influence and a focus on local, fresh, seasonal and—of course—wine-friendly food. Opening next month.

A worthy addition to your at-home wine collection is ONEHOPE Wine (onehopewine.com), which donates HALF of its profits to charitable causes. Their wines are all produced in partnership with Rob Mondavi, Jr. and their portfolio covers a wide range of price points, which means that your needs, from everyday BBQ wine to your special occasion sparkler, are covered.

And, speaking of barbeques, the things you'll need, along with wine, to keep the party going all summer long are cooking tools. We love All-Clad's Stainless Steel BBQ sets and grilling pans (all-clad.com), which guarantee perfect and even heat distribution—your steak's perfect sear will be the talk of the town.

Whether you're grilling up a storm in your backyard or heading to one of the Hamptons world famous beaches, don't forget to throw InnoFlask portable speaker in your bag (innodevice.com). The portable speaker comes inside its own carrying case that's no bigger than a sunglass case, allowing you to listen to your favorite tunes with ease. Better yet, despite its diminutive size and weight (under a pound), the sound is as clear as crystal and gets loud enough to cover a fairly large area.

InnoFlask also works fantastically as an outdoor workout companion—especially if you take a preworkout boost via Eboost's latest launch Pow (Ricky's, 50 Main Street, East Hampton). The brand is calling it a workout aphrodisiac and they're on the money (seriously!). Simply mix the brightly hued powder with water and lots of ice —the colder, the better tasting—and down it five minutes before your workout.

Post sweat session cool down with Fishers Island Lemonade (filemonade.com), a craft cocktail made with vodka and whisky, natural lemon and honey at 9% ABV. Originated at The Pequot Inn, Fishers Island's only bar, this is the first time it has been canned and made available off island.

Also infused with lemon is the just launched Eau de Lacoste L.12.12 Jaune from Lacoste (817 Tanger Mall Drive, Riverhead; $45 for 50ml). Light and bright, the men's fragrance is so refreshing it could easily work as a unisex scent. It's also worth noting that this fragrance was specifically designed to incorporate ingredients that have been shown to have health benefits (we feel better about downing all those Tate's cookies already!)

Shopping mecca, Jobs Lane, Southampton

On the fashion front clover cloth, a new lifestyle apparel line available exclusively at LURKshop (28 West Water Street, Sag Harbor), has your organic tanks and tees needs covered while Galet, the French luxury loafer brand has launched Tour de Galet. The mobile retail pop-up store has embarked on a tour of the Hamptons with stops at Navy Beach, Rushmeyers and more throughout the season.

No matter where the weekend takes you don't forget to lather up with the East End's very own Hampton Sun (Sag Harbor Pharmacy, 120 Main Street, Sag Harbor). The brand has just launched their new Sunless Tanning Mist.

Beautiful Lawns Without the Noise

BY STEPHANIE KOSSMAN

wo Southampton locals, Hilary Woodward and Sally Van Allen, are changing the way lawns are mowed on the East End. Their new company, Reel Quiet Mowing, is an alternative lawn mowing service that is dedicated to operating quietly, efficiently and sustainably through the use of human-powered equipment.

It all started when Woodward was walking her two-year-old grandniece around Southampton. What Woodward expected to be a nice summer stroll in the Hamptons was interrupted by the sound of loud, noisy landscapers working at nearly every house they encountered. Her grandniece put her hands over her ears and shouted, "I don't like that sound!" And Woodward didn't either. Later that day, as she mowed her own lawn with her push reel mower, one of those old-fashioned mowers that operates by pushing alone, Woodward realized that there was an easy solution to a major problem on the East End.

Woodward quickly brought the idea to her lifelong best friend, Van Allen, who immediately got on board. Van Allen remembers, "She drove into my driveway and the gravel was flying behind her tries and she screamed, 'I have it! I have it!'" The two had been searching for the perfect outdoor business plan for the Hamptons, and they knew they'd found it with Woodward's idea for Reel Quiet Mowing. "This wouldn't be happening if Sally hadn't said 'let's do it," Woodward assures.

By replacing the commonly used, gas-powered equipment with human-powered push reel lawn mowers, rakes and brooms, Reel Quiet Mowing dramatically reduces the growing noise pollution on the East End. The noise is "disturbing to people's psyche," Woodward says. "There's this wonderful place out on the East End," Van Allen continues, "but now there's just noise."

In addition to reducing noise pollution, eliminating gas-powered equipment also greatly benefits the environment. Over 800 million gallons of gas are used each year in America to trim lawns alone, and 17 million gallons are spilled in the process. By simply switching to human-powered equipment, Reel Quiet Mowing has taken the first step to change these statistics.

As for the finished product, Woodward says the lawns trimmed by human-powered equipment have "some of the healthiest grass I've ever seen." The grass clippings left behind by push mowers supply the lawn with nitrogen and retain moisture.

Best of all, the prices of this sustainable mowing service are competitive. By replacing the large, costly equipment that typical lawn companies use including the large trucks that carry all of that equipment—Reel Quiet Mowing uses their modest fee to pay for a dedicated, friendly service from two local women who do it all themselves.

What century is this?

"It's a different experience for the client," Van Allen says. "There's friendliness and we're very intimate with their yard." Clients love to come outside and chat with Woodward and Van Allen as the two happily beautify the yard.

"It's really fun," Van Allen says, "it's like a walking meditation. It's so quiet and you get into a rhythm with the grass flowing around you."

So why isn't everyone using this type of equipment? Other companies may fear that Reel Quiet Mowing's approach to lawn care could be too time-consuming, but it's actually not the case. "It's surprising how efficient the mowers are," Woodward says. "It doesn't take any longer than walking behind a gas motor."

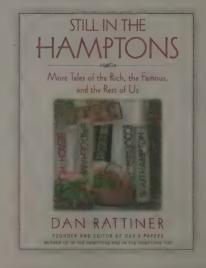

Van Allen truly believes that what is stopping larger companies from using human-powered equipment is "the mindset. This is the way it's been done for so many years. People don't realize that there is another way to do things."

Reel Quiet Mowing is currently offering mowing services for small village properties. Inquiries regarding other locations, property sizes and services will be considered, visit reelquietmowing.com or call 631-488-4795.

Eating Local with Chef Philippe Chow

BY KELLY LAFFEY

his summer, New York City favorite Philippe heads East. Chef Philippe Chow will serve his signature, classic Chinese dishes at Phillipe before the hotspot turns into a club for late-night gatherings. Chef Chow will also be on hand for Dan's Taste of Two Forks on July 18. Here, he discusses the importance of freshly prepared food and eating local.

What are you most looking forward to about being part of Dan's Taste of Summer this year?

We are looking forward to sharing the flavors of Philippe with our friends in the Hamptons.

One dish everyone should try at least once in life:

Peking Duck. It is a delicious combination of texture and flavor. Imagine this: a perfectly crisp skin, meltin-your-mouth tender meat, sweet plum sauce, fresh cucumber and scallion all wrapped in an impossibly thin pancake.

Best pairing of food and local wine:

...A nice Wölffer or Duck Walk Chardonnay with our American Black Bass is always a winner.

If you were to eat at Philippe as a guest, what would you order?

We are known for our Chicken
Satay, Peking Duck and House Mignon. Chef Phillipe Chow

However, one of my favorites is the whole steamed fish and mixed vegetables.

The perfect drink for a summer night:

One of our specialty cocktails, such as the Lychee Martini or Summer Light Margarita.

Food that defines summer on the East End:

When I think of summer on the East End, light and fresh come to mind. That's why I've introduced some steamed seafood salads to our menu for this season.

If you had two forks in your hands right now, what would you like to stick them in?

I love seafood. My favorite dishes are steamed whole fish and bok choy.

What is your favorite local ingredient?

My favorite local ingredients are fresh fish and seasonal produce...and, of course, the Long Island duck for our world-renowned Peking Duck.

What is your favorite aspect of being part of the East End's culinary culture?

We strive to provide our guests with quality food, excellent service and a great dining experience that we have become known for.

What does "local" mean to you?

Local means that it comes from within the community. I am proud to be part of this amazing community, making everyone feel as if they are a part of our family.

Three things you would pack to eat at the beach:

Cold steamed salmon or shrimp salad, duck spring rolls and a nice bottle of local white or rosé wine.

A great meal always begins with...

The best quality ingredients and the ones you love.

Dan's Taste of Summer kicks off with Dan's GrillHampton on Friday, July 17, and continues on Saturday, July 18, with Dan's Taste of Two Forks, both at Sayre Park, 156 Snake Hollow Road, Bridgehampton. Dan's Harvest East End, the can't-miss food and wine classic, rounds out the trio of events on August 22 in Cutchogue. great food in a comfortable setting

Talking with 75 Main's Chef Mark Militello

BY KELLY LAFFEY

ith its open-air design and prime peoplewatching Main Street location, 75 Main has become a go-to destination to enjoy fine dining, nightlife, and to see and be seen. Executive Chef Mark Militello will head up the restaurant's Taste of Two Forks table on Saturday, July 18. Here, he dishes about being a part of the local culinary culture.

What are you most looking forward to about being part of Dan's Taste of Summer this year?

Taste of summer is always a great event. I don't get to try other restaurants much, so it's a great opportunity to reconnect with other chefs and try their cuisine.

One dish that everyone should try at least once:

Rabbit, I like it braised with olives and served on bed of creamy polenta.

What is the best pairing of food and Long Island beer? Long Island wine?

I like the Southampton Publick House IPA. I would pair it with our 75 Main burger. [For wine,] a cabernet with prime meat

If you were to eat at your restaurant as a guest, what would you order?

Our pappardelle pasta with chili flakes, tomatoes, garlic finished with fresh mozzarella

Describe the adrenaline of working in a Hamptons kitchen.

Full rush. Celebrities are a constant Chef Mark Militello and so you have to make sure that the food is high quality and served in a timely manner.

What drew you to work on the East End?

I had a great relationship with [75 Main owner] Zach [Erdem] since we worked together in Florida, so working at 75 Main was a great fit.

If we looked inside your refrigerator right now, what would we find?

I don't own a refrigerator

Food that defines summer on the East End: Local fresh seafood

When you hear the phrase "local," what comes to mind?

Amusement. I spent my 20s in Europe where farm to table is an everyday occurrence. There, the vegetables, dairy and meat is locally sourced every day and had been for centuries.

If you had two forks in your hands right now, what would you like to stick them in?

Vegetables. I love them. Two particular favorites are beets and Swiss chard.

Favorite East End-inspired meal?
Baked stuffed clams

What is your favorite local ingredient?
Cheese from Mecox, Granola

g Cheese from Mecox, Granola grom Granola Girl and Greek yogurt lrom Kalypso.

What is your favorite aspect of being part of the local culinary culture?

Fresh products. I also live in Florida, so I enjoy trying what's available on the East End when here.

Where do you find inspiration?

The three places I find inspiration most are my home, travel and reading.

If you were to pack a meal for the beach, what are three things you'd bring?

Cold beer and a blanket

A great meal always begins with...

Good company 🔔

Wainscott Wonders on the Market

ainscott is a wonderful area on the west end of East Hampton Town, on the water. The South of the Highway residences are desirable for their proximity to the ocean and for their stunning architecture and numerous amenities.

28 Wainscott Hollow Road. $6,995,000

This Modern Farmhouse on half an acre is 7,300 square feet with six bedrooms, seven full bathrooms and a partial bath. Sag Harbor's DeMarco Development designed and built the residence, which was envisioned as anything but a run-of-the-mill spec home. Among the amenities are a heated pool, detached two-car garage, fireplaces, a family room, a dining room, a great room and a finished lower level with a gym, media room and recreational area. Call Matthew Breitenbach at Douglas Elliman in Bridgehampton, 631-537-5900.

New Construction Traditional $5,995,000

This 5,500-square-foot new construction Traditional has six bedrooms, five full bathrooms and one half-bath. The kitchen is spacious and the dining room is formal. Relax and entertain in the great room or the formal living room. The residence has three fireplaces. The 1.1-acre property, with a complete landscaping package, will include a gunite pool, a spa and a pool house. Call Main Street Properties, 631-324-1800.

32 Wainscott Hollow Road. $5,449,000

This Traditional new construction, just completed, has seven bedrooms, seven bathrooms and a partial bath. Located on half an acre, and overlooking 40 acres of farmland, the residence is 6,900 square feet. Talo Builders crafted the McDonough & Conroy Architects design, which includes a double-height paneled foyer, a great room with a wall of windows and an open kitchen with Bakes & CO cabinets and top-of-the-line appliances. There's a fireplace in the screened-in porch, which opens to a den with another fireplace, and a formal dining room with butler's pantry. The master suite is upstairs with his and her walk-in closets, an Italian marble bath, terrace and panoramic farm views. The basement has a rec room and bar, plus additional space ideal for a wine cellar, gym and media room. The yard features stone patios, a heated saltwater gunite pool and an outdoor shower. Call Enzo Morabito at Douglas Elliman in Bridgehampton, 631-537-6519.

2 Oakwood Court. $4,995,000.

This European-inspired residence by Perello Builders is 6,000 square feet on .92 acres. The home has six bedrooms, seven full bathrooms and two half-baths. The formal living room is sunken and includes a double-sided fireplace. The chef's kitchen has top-of-the-line appliances. A fully retractable glass-roof system, with 18' glass wall panels, lets in plenty of light and air through the open spaces. The 2,000-square-foot lower level is fully finished with a media room, staff quarters, recreational space and sauna. At the front entry is a courtyard, detached two-car garage and a covered walkway into the mudroom. The swimming pool, with beach entry, is T-shaped and has a swim-up bar. An outdoor living room has a fireplace and a cabana has a half-bath and outdoor shower. Call Christopher J. Burnside at Brown Harris Stevens in Bridgehampton, 631-537-4320.

70 Westwood Road. $4,495,000

On one acre, this Traditional is 4,600 square feet with five bedrooms and five bathrooms. The gourmet kitchen is country style with top-of-the-line appliances. The living room with beamed ceiling features a double-sided gas fireplace. The dining area has two walls of French doors leading to an outdoor entertaining space, which includes a fire pit and fireplace with a heated gunite pool surrounded by brick patio. The finished lower level has a walk-in wine cellar, weight room and miniature basketball court. A breezeway connects the residence and garage.
